Frustratingly great!Von janosch73There are one kind of five-star books and another kind of five-star books. Come Undone is both of these. A book I had to read in one sitting and a book Im rereading already because Im sure I missed something in my hurry to get to its end. And what an end it was.Kiras writing is still top-notch and to the point. At times while reading I was thinking of how can she come up with a sentence like that because the writing is brilliant but at other times I was just too flabbergasted and thought: Did he really say that? Or did she really say that? Her characters speak to each other but they really dont hear or listen to each other. And that fact made this book really frustrating and the least favourite one of mine in the series that I truly love. But it still earns its five stars. The characters started to drive me crazy and I didnt like all the twists in the plot but I believe that they might have been necessary for the whole story of this trio. It was hard to read about the narrow-mindedness of people and their reaction to Erin, Jack and Simon as a trio, in- or excluding Erin. Or how Erin was willing to do everything possible just to shine in Simons eyes and for him to love her. But then again, that was what makes this book and the entire series so real. Life is not always a bed of roses and amazing sex is not always enough. At times I was thinking if the book is even too real, each character too egoistical because they started to lose the unity they were, if they ever even were one. Was there really love between them? How do they show it? Was there enough of Jack to whom I have my puppy love? Luckily there is some laughter in Come Undone that helped with dealing with the frustrating characters that Kira really likes to put through an emotional meat grinder. As always in Kiras books there were some really hot sex scenes, good banter and emotional turmoil. Those Id already call her trademarks as an excellent writer. I know the story of my favourite three is coming to its end on February 9th and already I feel the sadness but also the excitement about seeing how their story will unwrap. Its only 105 days from today. Its time for me to test my patience, again. ;)
