The citizens of Victorian London are lucky to have a person as innovative, perceptive, and brilliant as Inspector Weatherspoon working for Scotland Yard. The Inspector has caught many killers before they have the chance to strike again. However, no one is aware, including the Inspector, that he is assisted on each case by his household staff, who using their vast underground connections, gather information to put the pieces of the puzzle together. From Mrs. Jeffries the housekeeper, to Betsy the maid, to the rest of Weatherspoon's domestic entourage, all of them work together in a cohesive unit with one goal in mind: to bring fame and glory to their adored employer. The team has their work cut out for them when Hannah Cameron, a universally disliked person, dies. At first, it appeared that she inadvertently walked in on an on-going robbery. However, the more the team digs, the more suspects surface. As the evidence points to one person in particular, Mrs. Jeffries wonders if her group's investigative prowess has deserted them. It seems that the most likely murderer had everything to lose with the victim's death. This combination police procedural cum cozy is a fine example of one of the most enjoyable and endearing mystery series in bookstores today. It is sheer pleasure to watch the interactions between the gullible Weatherspoon and his intelligent staff as they gently nudge him in the direction they want him to go. The distinction in class during the Victorian Age adds a dazzling and entertaining glimpse of history that cannot be gleaned from a text book. MRS. JEFFRIES QUESTIONS THE ANSWER is a perfect novel to read to get into the holiday spirit. Harriet Klausner
