Maxfield's writing, she is one of my all time autobuy m/m authors.I liked the first book in this series and I absolutely loved the second one. So, to be honest...while this is defintely a good one, it doesn't have the deep intensity of the second one. That said, I still enjoyed reading it a lot, quality writing is quality writing and not every book needs to put me through an emotional wringer. I liked Tripp as a character a lot (he is "real" with all his great and less great traits), Lucho seemed even a bit too good to be true but Tripp's mother annoyed the hell out of me. Still, this was part of the story and the problems so it's okay. Only the end came too abrupt, especially her behaviour. This all felt a bit too hastened and not quite right for me. But all in all a good book in this series.

Kurzbeschreibung Love can heal the deepest wounds A sense of duty brings a soldier home but a passionate cowboy makes him want to stay. After his brother's tragic death, Tripp has to leave the army and return to New Mexico to take care of his mother while his father is in prison for arson. Seeking work at the J-Bar Ranch, Tripp is immediately drawn to injured cowboy Lucho Reyes, whose foot was accidentally crushed by a rescue horse. But will the sins of the father interfere with the desires of the son? Tripp's father may be responsible for the death of Lucho's grandfather. Now Tripp must balance caring for his mother, repairing his father's damages, and trying to win the heart of a man who has every reason to hate him and his family.

Z. A. Maxfield started writing in 2007 on a dare from her children and never looked back. Pathologically disorganized, and perennially optimistic, she writes as much as she can, reads as much as she dares, and enjoys her time with family and friends. If anyone asks her how a wife and mother of four manages to find time for a writing career, she'll answer, It's amazing what you can accomplish if you give up housework. Her published books include My Cowboy Heart, My Heartache Cowboy, Crossing Borders, Epic Award finalist St. Nachos, Drawn Together, ePistols at Dawn, Notturmo, Stirring Up Trouble, and Vigil.
