KundenrezensionenHilfreichste Kundenrezensionen2 von 2 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Not your typical Mushy romance.Von Loki ShamsFirst of all, I would just like to say that Elizabeth Lowell is an exceptional writer. Her stories never lack depth or substance, and this book is certainly no exception. This story involves the beautiful Cat Cochran, a photographer who lives and breathes her work. She is a woman who works day and night so that she can support her mother and two siblings. She is a woman who has been hurt by an unforgiving past. Travis Danvers is a self-made rich man. His past has also left him unwary and cautious of all women. He cannot trust that any women would love anything more than money. Even himself. With that state of mind, Travis meets Cat, the lovely photographer for his book on sailboats. He is drawn to her quiet beauty, but of course assumes that she is like most of the other women he has known. Women who are only interested in him for his vast fortune. He desperately wants to believe otherwise, but he has been hurt before. Even though Cat has been deeply hurt by "rich" men, she cannot help but fall for the striking Travis Danvers. Because of her immense responsibilities, Cat cannot stop overworking herself. Travis tries to buy her time with him, but she cannot accept. She will not accept his money, she will be no man's mistress. Cat Cochran takes care of her own self. Cat and Travis' past hurts come in the way of their blossoming love. Past betrayals make Travis hurt Cat in an unforgivable manner. Alone and afraid, Cat loses something deeply cherished, something which means the world to her. Only the love from Travis can make the wronged, right. This is an excellent novel, which will take you and sweep you off your feet. I recommend it wholeheartedly. You won't regret it.

To Shed Some Tears Von ebyerly@epix.net Elizabeth Lowell is authoress extraordinaire, the feelings that she puts into her characters make them appear so real, that their feelings are your feeling and their lives are your lives. I shed tears reading this story and felt like I was part of the cast of fictional characters in this book. Travis Danvers, the hero, a millionaire who will only marry another millionaire, burnt by a woman that only wanted his money. Cat Cochran, the heroine, working 12-hour days trying to put her nieces thru med school, burnt by an ex-millionaire husband, wanted nothing to do with men with money. Will they solve their differences and learn to trust and love each other? Follow their journey on their path to trust and happiness.
