Von Joyce Lamb : True Vision (Berkley Sensation) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised True Vision (Berkley Sensation):

KundenrezensionenHilfreichste Kundenrezensionen0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. True Series, Book One.Von Detra FitchCharlotte "Charlie" Trudeau lives in Florida. She works as an investigative journalist for her father's newspaper, the Lake Avalon Gazette (LAG). While she is out one afternoon, Charlie hears her name being called out by a lady she does not know. As the woman is crossing the street to speak with Charlie, she is the victim of a hit-and-run. The lady dies while Charlie is holding her hand. The next thing Charlie knows is that she is reliving the last several minutes, but it is as if Charlie was the unknown woman instead of herself. This is Charlie's first empathic vision. Chicago Police Detective Noah Lassiter is understandably upset when he travels to Florida. His good friend, Laurette, had recently gone to Lake Avalon in hopes of finding her cousin. Instead of bringing about a family reunion, Laurette was hit by a car and killed. When Noah walks up to Charlie's house, he is just in time to save her life. Someone in a ninja outfit is strangling Charlie. As Noah and Charlie spend time together, Charlie learns things about herself and her mother's side of the family that she has never before imagined. Elise, her mother, claims not to have any living relatives, yet when Charlie confronts Elise about her cousin, Laurette, it is clear that Noah is right. Charlie has an entire line of unknown relatives somewhere. Elise can refuse to answer Charlie's questions, but that would not stop the investigative journalist from seeking out the truth. Charlie is equally amazed when Noah realizes that Charlie is having empathic visions and considers them to be normal. Noah has solved quite a few cases with the help of Laurette's abilities. Her new frightening abilities are not Charlie's only major problem. Charlie is tired of her boss shooting down her articles because they revealed scams that local businesses were pulling on the public. Some of those businesses advertised in the LAG. Charlie went around his back to get one published about a local car dealership. The article resulted in most of LAG's advertisers pulling out their ads. Now the newspaper is about to go out of business and it seems as if everyone is furious with Charlie. As Charlie tries to get a grip on her empathy and fix the problems she caused at the LAG, Noah tries to simply keep her alive. The longer Charlie and Noah are together, the hotter their attraction to each other seems to burn. No matter what, Noah is determined to keep this amazing reporter alive, by his side, and in his bed. * FOUR STARS! This is the first title in the series about three sisters who have no idea about the empathic ability hiding within each of them. This is Charlie's story. The author, Joyce Lamb, has done a terrific job of showing how much trouble Charlie has in believing her powers are real and then learning to cope with them. To help Charlie out a bit, the author adds a beach side psychic who is extremely charming, as well as a tad mysterious. I feel the lady to be a brilliant touch and adds some Southern flavor. * Reviewed by Detra Fitch of Huntress Reviews.

Kurzbeschreibung The author of Cold Midnight delivers a new paranormal suspense trilogy... A newspaper reporter is living an ordinary life, until witnessing a fatal hit-and-run accident gives her an intense psychic power she has no clue how to handle-and brings a Chicago police detective to her doorstep.
